Professor Siew Tzuh (Stephanie) Tang -
IPCFRC Executive Committee member

*Professor, School of Nursing
Chang Gung University
Taiwan*

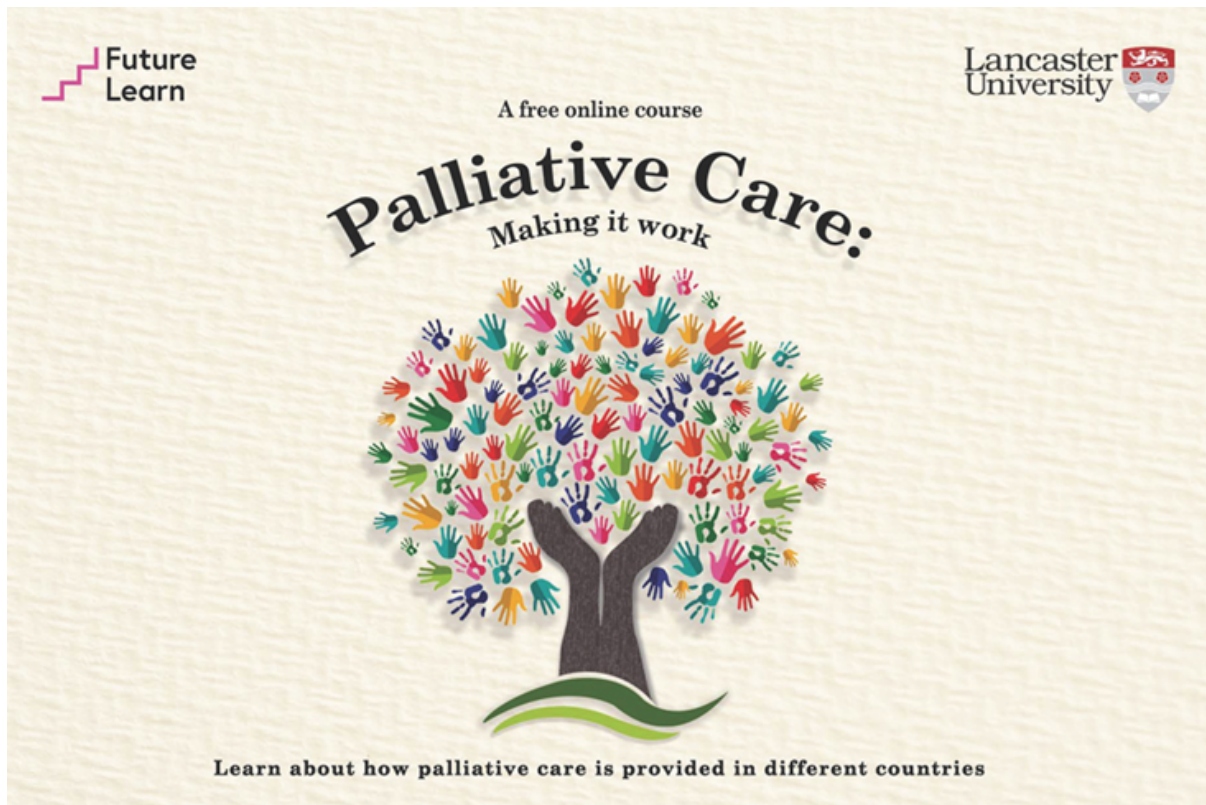

Dr Tang has worked in the field of oncology nursing, specifically in end-of-life (EOL) care for terminally ill cancer patients and their family caregivers for over 30 years as a staff nurse, educator, and researcher. She established the first hospice home care program in Taiwan to facilitate dying at home as the majority of Taiwanese terminally ill cancer patients prefer under the strong cultural practice of “the fallen leaves can return to their roots”. She is a Professor, School of Nursing at Chang Gung University, Taiwan, R.O.C. Her current research focuses on exploring preferences and actual EOL care, death preparation, and quality of death and dying of terminally ill cancer patients, as well as decision conflict and trajectories of decisional regrets as well as their impact on depressive symptoms during bereavement for family surrogate decision makers of terminally ill cancer patients. Dr Tang publishes widely on issues pertaining to EOL care, family caregiving, and family adjustment during bereavement. Her research work has been broadly cited locally and internationally.

“The painful experience of losing my mother motivated me to devote myself to relieving the suffering of terminally ill cancer patients and their family members through clinical care, education, and research. I deeply empathize with the challenges, difficulties, and conflicts encountered by family members when they try to fulfil the Confucian doctrine of filial duty in providing end-of-life (EOL) care. But more often, I was inspired by family members’ strength, courage, and wisdom in balancing and transcending the challenges of their life both with and without their loved one. Therefore, my research projects focus not only on family caregivers’ caregiving burden, EOL-care decision conflicts and their impact, but also on how they use internal and external resources to overcome challenges during their loved one’s dying process and in bereavement. Collaborating internationally with other IPCFRC members will facilitate my improving EOL care for Taiwanese family caregivers.”

Integrated palliative care: lessons from practice

Registration is now open for a free, massive open online course (MOOC) focusing on palliative care. Commencing on October 17th for three weeks, this free online course is co-ordinated by the International Observatory on End of Life Care, a world-leader in the field of palliative care based at Lancaster University.

The MOOC will be of interest to anyone with a personal or professional interest in palliative care. The course is based upon current European research which examines integrated palliative care services in Europe. International guest speakers will provide real-life examples of effective practice.

By taking part, you will have the opportunity to explore and discuss the best ways to care for and support people who are approaching the end of life.

Review of literature related to family carer research

One of the initiatives of the IPCFRC is to compile a listing of publications related to family caregiver research in palliative care. This list is updated annually, and serves as a basic resource to aid those who are looking for peer-reviewed publications related to family caregiver research in palliative care. The 2016 version is now available as a downloadable resource on the [\[IPCFRC website\]](#).

Recent articles relevant to IPCFRC members

In each edition we will feature some recently published articles relevant to IPCFRC members.

If you have published in a peer-reviewed journal recently and the subject matter is relevant to the IPCFRC community, please email centre.palliativecare@svha.org.au with the subject 'IPCFRC Newsletter' and we will feature your publication in an upcoming edition.
